

WATCH.....

If you want to consider how Duffy's poetry is created and performed, watch this talk she gave:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4At4SSVcat4> . Alternatively, think about how Paris is represented in Emily in Paris on Netflix.

READ...

We will be starting with Poetry and The Paris Anthology in September.

For a taste of Duffy's writing read through some of the ones suggested on here:

<https://www.scottishpoetrylibrary.org.uk/poet/carol-ann-duffy/>

Why Paris? Paris has become more than a city for lots of people, it represents ideas about food, fashion and freedom. For fun you could read the novel Mrs Hemingway by Naomi Wolf for the allure of life for American in postwar Paris, or The Paris Wife by Paula McLain. Alternatively try the memoir A Moveable Feast by Ernest Hemmingway.

GET ORGANISED.....

You will need lined paper and two folders. Buy a copy of The Handmaid's Tale and The Great Gatsby so that you can make your own notes alongside the text. Your Paris anthology and Duffy poems will be provided for you.

TASK.....

Print out and read The Yellow Wallpaper by Charlotte Gilmour Perkins.

- Could the wallpaper have been any other color? How would a change in color have changed the story? How does the color "yellow" affect you? Do you like (or dislike) it? What are the psychological implications of the color "yellow"? How would a different color change the story?
- Do you care about the characters? Do you like (or dislike) them? How real (or well-developed) do they seem to you?
- Does The Yellow Wallpaper end the way you expected? Did you expect a longer (or more involved narrative)? How? Why?
- Would you recommend The Yellow Wallpaper to a friend? Why? Why not?
- What did you enjoy (or hate) most about The Yellow Wallpaper? Why?
